

Reported speech memory challenge game

Choose one of the things in the list below. Try to remember what was said during one real example of that kind of situation, e.g. the conversation at breakfast this morning. Tell your partner what the situation was, when it was and who was there, then tell them (exactly) seven things that people said. You don't need to worry about the language that you use at this stage, as long as your partner understands what was said, so direct speech is also fine. If you can't remember seven things that people (really) said, your partner gets one point for each sentence that is missing, e.g. one point if you only said six sentences.

Your partner can ask you questions when you finish (if they like), then they should say (exactly) seven sentences reporting back what everyone said during that conversation. To get a point, all sentences must match what you said and be in correct reported speech (= indirect speech, e.g. "He said that...", not direct speech), with no points if what they report doesn't match what you said, if they report what was said in direct speech, or they didn't make all the necessary changes when making the reported speech sentence (e.g. still saying "I" instead of "you").

When they have made seven sentences or have given up making more sentences, tell them how many points they have scored and any reported speech that they missed or got wrong. Then change roles and play the same game with a different situation below. Continue changing roles and playing the same game until your teacher stops you.

Useful phrases for reporting what someone said

"A man/ A woman/ Someone/ Someone there/ Someone working there..."

"The man/ The woman/ He/ She..."

"... asked if/ whether..."

"... asked when/ where/ who/ why/ which/ how/ how many/ how much/ how long..."

"... asked... to..." / "... told... to..."

"... told... (that)..." / "... said (that)..."

Possible questions to ask about what people said

"Why did... say/ ask/ tell...?"

"How did you reply (to...)?"

"Did you agree about...?"

"Had you discussed... before?"

"What did you talk about after that?"

"What did... say (about...)?"

Useful language for playing the game

"Yes, that's right. (One point)."

"That's right, but not in (correct) reported speech. You should've said (something like)..."

"That's not quite right. Actually... said..."

Ask about any situations below which you don't understand, working together to make possible reported speech in that situation each time.

Extension: Play the same game, but also guessing five other things that people said which your partner didn't report. These phrases must also be true and in correct reported speech to get a point.
