

School timetables battleships game

Student A

Take turns asking "What do you study at... on...?" and/ or "Do you study English at... on...?" to try to find all of your partner's English lessons. The first person to find all the other person's English lessons is the winner. It might help to write their schedule under yours (with X for not English), to check how many you have found and which squares you have already asked about.

	Monday	Tuesday	Wed	Thursday	Friday
9:00 - 9:45	Drama	Science	P.E.	Maths	English
9:50 - 10:35	English	English	English	I.T.	Chinese

Make your own grids version

Put these six English lessons into the table on the next page, making sure your partner can't see your sheet and that the ones in groups stay together that way:

English	English	English
---------	---------	---------

(English at the same time for three days in a row)

English
English

(English for two lessons in a row on the same day)

English
---------

(One other English lesson)

Fill the other lessons with other subjects, for example:

Geography	Chemistry	Science
Home Economics	Social Studies	History
Geography	Biology	Economics
Psychology	Business Studies	French
Physical Education (P.E.)	English Literature	Woodwork
Religious Education (R.E.)	Information Technology (= I.T.)
Maths (= Mathematics)	Music	Drama
Japanese	Chinese	Ethics
Korean

Take turns asking "What do you study at... on...?" and/ or "Do you study English at... on...?" to try to find all of your partner's English lessons. The first person to find all the other person's English lessons is the winner.
